I love my whole country, with as ardent an attachment, as animates any affixed at the city of Jackson, the 15th. day of May, human being. All my efforts in the late exciting A. D. 1851, and of the sovreignty of Mississippi, the controversy, have been directed to securing the thirty-fourth. good of the whole, and if I have differed from some of you, as to the best means of effecting that object, there has been no difference between us as to the end in view-the peace, prosperity, and happiness of this whole people.

In my action on this subject, I have not been a volunteer, or attempted to be a leader. I was a of the constitutional rights of the South, and to the dissemination of the constitutional rights of the South, and to the dissemination of the constitutional rights of the South, and to the dissemination of the constitutional rights of the South, and to the dissemination of the South, and to the dissemination of the South and the dissemination of the South and the south and the dissemination of the South. member of the first Nashville Convention, in conjunction with the other Judges of the High Court, adjusting denortment of the paper will be under the charge of style, at the City Hall, where he would be happy to by the request of both political parties of the State. compa

If that redress should be refused when so asked, then it suggests the call of a Southern Convention, to consider of the grievances of the South, and of the mode and measures of redress. The plan of action of either Convention to be laid before the people, for their adoption or rejection, and of course, to be without effect until ratified. Nothing was recommended. but reason and argument, unless oppression should reach a point, which the people should think intolerable; when, according to both parties, in this State, the States may provide for their own safety. The point at which the oppression should be deemed intolerable, was the great matter of difference between them.

The people have decided against the first step which was proposed-a Convention of the State. There all action ceases-it is an end of the matter. The peculiar institution of the South requires repose for its security. I acquiesce in the decision, and hope the country will be restored to quiet and harmony.
